Genre: Horror

Setting: Old, damaged mansion on a cold rainy night

Main characters: Player, Companion

Objective: Collect all shards of artifact which eventually brings the companion back to life

Relevance to themes:

- Comic: the companion appears in the player's mind in a thought bubble like in comics, the text on screen to guide player also appears like comic text boxes
- Light: Setting is in the absence of light, Each artifact gives light, and when all are assembled they light the path to the companion who comes alive due to the energy from these shards
- Twist: The companion turns out to be evil and wants to kill the player.

How the game is supposed to go:

The player wakes up and starts getting images in his head of an entity(the companion), who starts guiding the player in order to come back to life.

The companion acts as a friend, and talks about how it can help the player once it comes back to life.

Companion leads the player to a dark mansion (cutscene) and tells him to find Artifacts, each of which gives light.

Player navigates through the mansion under the guidance of the semblance that the companions has formed in his mind.

The player finds scary traps and entities in the mansion, fights them off in order to collect each of the shards.

Eventually when all the artifacts are collected, a light guides the player towards a portal which takes him to a separate room which does not originally appear on the map where a doll that looks like the companion's image in his head lies.

The artifacts bring the companion back to life but contrary to his promises to improve the player's life, he tries to kill the player.
